

A History of the Australian Environmental Movement

Author(s): Libby Connors [1], Drew Hutton [2]

Cambridge University Press, Cambridge, 1999, pp. 324

Survey from early concerns about conservation through the 'second wave' 1945-72, and the campaigns of 1973-83 up to the subsequent professionalization of the movement. Chapter 4 'Taking to the Streets' covers 'green bans' and the anti-uranium campaigns; 'Taking to the Bush' looks at direct action on a number of issues, culminating in the 1982 blockade of the Franklin Dam; and Chapter 6 'Fighting for Wilderness' assesses further protests around Australia. Chapter 8 considers the role of the Green Party.

Source URL (modified on 10/11/2016 - 11:48): <https://civilresistance.info/biblio-item/1999/history-australian-environmental-movement>

Links

[1] <https://civilresistance.info/author/1550>

[2] <https://civilresistance.info/author/1551>