

Direct Action in British Environmentalism

Editor(s): Benjamin Seel [1], Matthew Patterson [2], Brian Doherty [3]

Routledge, London, 2000, pp. 223

Essays include a survey of British environmentalism 1988-97 in the changing political context, assessments of different types of environmental activity and role of the media. Brian Doherty, 'Manufacturing Vulnerability: Protest Camp Tactics' looks at evolution of nonviolent direct action tactics and transnational influences. There is some discussion of the incidence of violence and media (mis)perceptions.

Source URL (modified on 08/11/2016 - 15:56): <https://civilresistance.info/biblio-item/2000/direct-action-british-environmentalism>

Links

[1] <https://civilresistance.info/author/1562>

[2] <https://civilresistance.info/author/1563>

[3] <https://civilresistance.info/author/1520>