

---

What do Europeans consider sexual harassment?

Author: Vera Kem [1]

In: DW, 2017

Kem discusses a survey showing how attitudes to social harassment vary across Europe, and also how EU countries have different laws and punishments for harassment. Notes that although the Council of Europe Istanbul Convention of 2011 prohibiting violence against women has been ratified by many West European states (though not by Germany until 2017), legal provisions, and in particular reporting rates, vary between countries. France provides for a fine of up to 30,000 euros and two years in prison, or in the case of harassment by a work superior up to three years in prison.

Available online at:

<https://www.dw.com/en/what-do-europeans-consider-sexual-harassment/a-41346892> [2]

---

Source URL (modified on 04/12/2019 - 18:34):<https://civilresistance.info/biblio-item/2017/what-do-europeans-consider-sexual-harassment>

Links

[1] <https://civilresistance.info/author/2448> [2] <https://www.dw.com/en/what-do-europeans-consider-sexual-harassment/a-41346892>