

Is ‘feminism’ really helping women’s rights in the Middle East?”

Author: Zarqa Parvez [1]

In: Middle East Monitor, 2019

Debates how intersectional feminism is relevant to the Middle East, in relation to a different conception of class, ethnicity and social status from the West. It examines whether a fixed understanding of feminism – based on a westernized value system - might be detrimental to the achievement of women’s rights in Middle Eastern societies.

Available online at:

<https://www.middleeastmonitor.com/20190131-is-feminism-really-helping-womens-rights-in-the-middle-east/> [2]

Source URL (modified on 18/05/2020 - 16:09):<https://civilresistance.info/biblio-item/2019/feminism-really-helping-womens-rights-middle-east>

Links

[1] <https://civilresistance.info/author/2889> [2] <https://www.middleeastmonitor.com/20190131-is-feminism-really-helping-womens-rights-in-the-middle-east/>