

Language

Kenney, Padraic, A Carnival of Revolution: Central Europe 1989 [1], 352, Princeton NJ, Princetown University Press, 2003

Youthful personal impressions combined with later historical research on Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Slovenia. Especially strong on the playful resistance of groups such as the Orange Alternative in Wroclaw.

Lewis, Paul G., Democracy and Civil Society in Eastern Europe [2], ed. Lewis, Paul G. [3], Basingstoke and New York, Macmillan and St. Martin's Press, 1992, pp. 179

Mostly about prospects for civil society in post-communist context, but drawing on theory and practice of 1980s. Includes a chapter on the movement in Slovenia that led to it breaking away from Yugoslavia.

Ramet, Pedro ; Martin, Chris ; Hopken, Wolfgang, Yugoslavia in the 1980s [4], ed. Holland, Barbara [5], Boulder CO, Westview Press, 1985, pp. 354

Randle, Michael, People Power: The Building of a New European Home [6], Stroud, Hawthorne Press, 1991, pp. 224

Chapter 1 discusses the context of the revolutions, ch. 2 the build up of protest (including in Bulgaria) and the role of international pressures. Part II comprises interviews with key participants in 1989, both about the revolutions and future possibilities. Includes interviews on Romania and Slovenia.

Source URL (retrieved on 24/04/2024 - 19:16):<https://civilresistance.info/bibliography/country/Slovenia>

Links

[\[1\] https://civilresistance.info/biblio-item/2003/carnival-revolution-central-europe-1989](https://civilresistance.info/biblio-item/2003/carnival-revolution-central-europe-1989) [2]

<https://civilresistance.info/biblio-item/1992/democracy-and-civil-society-eastern-europe> [3]

<https://civilresistance.info/author/368> [4] <https://civilresistance.info/biblio-item/1985/yugoslavia-1980s> [5]

<https://civilresistance.info/author/1873> [6] <https://civilresistance.info/biblio-item/1991/people-power-building-new-european-home>